ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO

The Daily Telegraph

LONDON, JANUARY 1920

"WEEPING STATUE."

MAGIC AND MIRACLES.

VERDICT AND SENTENCE.

BURDEN JURY, SUNDAY.

Judgement was delivered yesterday in the so-called sorcery trial, in which a police official, a stockbroker, an orchestra conductor, and a bank clerk were accused of having assaulted a Syrian priest named Sapoungi. All four were sentenced to three months' imprisonment, with the benefit of the First Offenders Act, and a joint fine of 500l.

The case was one in which miracles, sorcery, and witchcraft all figured. The defendants, however, were not accused of magic, but, as stated above, of assault. It was the plaintiff whose alleged dealings in sorcery led the four accused to do him bodily hurt. The defendants were accused by the plaintiff, the Abbé Sapoungi, describing himself as a former Vicar-General of Syria, of having had resort to assault and violence in order to extort from him certain documents relative to a miraculous figure known as "Weeping Virgin".

A certain Madame Marie Mesmin had this wonderful statue of the Virgin in her possession. The bank clerk stated that he had seen the statue and that there was no doubt that it wept real tears, which could be collected in a little vase for the cure of the sick. The tears in the vase increased until they overflowed, when, being transferred to a large glass, they still swelled until several vessels were full. In 1914 the Abbé Sapoungi paid a visit to Madame Mesmin, who, so it is stated, not only made him welcome, but deprived herself in order that he might be clothed and provided for. The abbé is declared to have repaid her kindness by the endeavour to get into his own hands the sums accruing from the "miracles" of the Weeping Virgin. Finally, on account of unpriestlike conduct, the abbé was sent to Nantes by order of the ecclesiastical authorities, who also ordered that the Weeping Virgin should be taken to a Franciscan convent, where, ever since, her eyes have been dry.

From the day that Sapoungi arrived at Nantes, Madame Mesmin declared herself to be the victim of a Satanic persecution. An invisible mouth bit her and left the traces of its teeth on her cheek. The most terrible suffering and temptations assailed her, including a homicidal tendency. She was convinced that all this was due to the evil influence of the abbé, who, she said, had a magnetic power over her. Further, she declared that Sapoungi had celebrated Black Masses, for which he employed the blood of foats and other unclean animals, and also a nude female figure made in wax.

In order to put an end to the persecution endured by Madame Mesmin, the four defendants decided to go to Nantes to force Sapoungi to return certain papers relating to Our Lady of Tears, alleged to have been stolen by him, and also to destroy his instruments of sorcery. They armed themselves with spiritual and temporal weapons, and, after an early morning Mass, invaded the abbé's sanctuary. Their temporal arms included a dog-whip, a rubber-club filled with lead shot, a horse-whip, and handcuffs, the last provided by the police inspector. The struggle lasted some three-quarters of an hour, the "magician" putting up a vigorous resistance, even endeavouring to use a knife, but at last, smothering and bound on the floor, he gave up the keys of his desk. In this were found 631 letters and a number of articles which, it was supposed, he used in his sorceries, but no trace of the wax figure was discovered. The four spell-breakers then left. It was at this precise moment, according to Madame Mesmin, that she ceased to suffer from the spell which had been cast over her.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO

The Daily Telegraph

LONDON, JANUARY 1920

AMERICAN PRESIDENCY. MR. HOOVER'S "BOOM." HEARST'S LATEST CANARD.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT, NEW YORK, SUNDAY. Mr. Hearst's newspapers have organised a campaign to defeat Mr. Hoover's boom for the Presidency on the grounds that Mr. Hoover's backing comes from three quarters only, "Wall Street, Great Britain, and the White House." As to Great Britain I need not tell you that Mr. Hearst's allegation is preposterous, but the type of reader to whom he appeals is ready to believe anything and everything if there is a chance of injuring Anglo-American friendship. Mr. Hearst, in an editorial, explains that Americans do not dislike the British, but we do dislike, he says, British "Imperialism" and the British aristocratic caste, who find jobs as the tools of British Imperialism.

According to Mr. Hearst's story, which is submitted to some millions of readers through his chain of newspapers, the boom for Mr. Hoover was launched at a most exclusive luncheon given by Colonel House, friend and confidant of President Wilson. "At the luncheon given by Colonel House there were representatives of the various interests supporting Mr. Hoover, and anxious to secure his election as President. They included Ralph Pulitzer and Frank Cobb, respectively owner and editor of the New York World, Cleveland H. Dodge, the THl Street nancier, Cyrus Curtis, the Philadelphia publisher, and Vis-count Grey, the British Ambassador to the United States." "It is rather unusual," says Mr. Hearst's New Yor k American, "to have the British Ambassador present at an occasion at which a boom for American President is launched, but Mr. Hoover is understood to be the candidate of the Democratic administration pledged to perpetuate the Wilson policies, and naturally the British Ambassador is anxious to see the policies continued which have been so advantageous to England."

A SOCIAL LUNCHEON.

I need not tell you that the luncheon in question was purely a social affair such as takes place in New York almost daily, and had not the remotest connection with politics. In ordinary circumstances one might dismiss the story and the innuendo with the contempt it deserves, but as an illustration of the depths to which party politicians will descend when a Presidential election is at hand the story has a special value which will appeal to all students of Anglo-American relations.

According to the New York American, "the participation of Lord Grey in the meeting at which the boom for Hoover was launched created a sensation in the Senate." I see no confirmation whatever for this statement, because the legislators at Washington are perfectly well acquainted with Hearst journalism, and do not attach the slightest value to a story designed only to tickle the palates of Anglophobes. Mr. Pulitzer, one of those present at the luncheon given by Colonel House, says the story is a "pure fake." He adds: "The luncheon was merely a social affair... and there was no discussion whatever of Presidential candidates."

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO The Daily Telegraph LONDON, FEBRUARY 1920 NEW OUTRAGE BY THE POET D'ANNUNZIO. GENERAL KIDNAPPED.

FROM A. BEAUMONT. MILAN, SATURDAY.
Fiume has again become the scene of extraordinary incidents, one of which is the capture and kidnapping of General Nigra, commander of the Italian troops on the Amistice Line, outside Fiume. The outrage is straining the patience of the Italian Government to the highest degree, and the newspapers to-day denounce D'Annunzio's latest achievement in unmeasured terms.
General Nigra had become unpopular with D'Annunzio and the Fiume garrison because he strictly enforced his orders and was vigilant along the frontier line. There had been a friendly understanding between the Fiume garrison and the Italian Regulars on the frontier line, by which both sides freely approached each other, and the Fiume patriots took advantage of this to waylay General Nigra. His capture had been decided upon by the Fiume patriots, and D'Annunzio had given instruction to an officer to seize the general. The officer entrusted with this mission laid his plans, and, learning some days ago that General Nigra was going to Trieste, and would return alone with his chauffeur in the evening, he placed a small body of Arditi in ambush at a passage near Grobnico. Towards evening the motor-car approached, and the six Arditi jumped out into the road, and held up the car. The general immediately divined their intention, and said: "What do you want with me? These are not things to do between friends and Italians." The officer replied that he had orders to arrest him and conduct him to Fiume.
After a useless protest General Nigra yielded and was conducted some distance on foot, across the fields and out of sight of the sentries, into the territory of Fiume and, as no means of conveyance was at hand, he was compelled to continue the way into the town of Fiume afoot. It was already late when he arrived with his escort at the Governor's residence, and was placed, by D'Annunzio's orders, under arrest in the Governor's Palace with a sentry before his door. He has not been free to communicate with anyone without D'Annunzio's permission.

This new incident is described as intolerable by the leading newspapers. The Corriere della Sera says: "The moral and material relations between the Commander of Fiume and the Italian Government have become intolerable, and the adventure of General Nigra being arrested by a dozen Arditi and two subaltern officers by command of the Governor of Fiume cannot be read without making every Italian blush. D'Annunzio's expedition from Ronchi perhaps avoided Fiume being policed by foreigners, but after his first success there was no excuse for him for helping to create in the Italian army a deplorable spirit of insubordination and contempt for discipline. Some of his first companions realised it, and have gradually withdrawn from him. Openhanded brigandage is rampant in Istria, and D'Annunzio's Arditi have shown how easy it is to kidnap an Italian general on the public highway. These men, who left Italy in the name of patriotism, foster such insubordination in the army as to expose the whole country to danger. Only a few days ago they seized an Italian steamer with merchandise and millions aboard on the high seas, as in the old days of pirates, and to-day they carry off a general from the midst of his command. Their blindness is such that they disregard not only the plebiscite and the people of Fiume, and remain there against the will of its inhabitants, but nourish vague revolutionary ideas of championing every insurrection and universal conflagration which is to consume the British Empire, after which, they proclaim, Italy will be great and prosperous."

The Corriere here, for the first time, hints at the anti-British campaign conducted by D'Annunzio, hitherto completely unknown to the Italian public, and which excited general amazement even here.
